THE GLOBAL FUND
Office of the Inspector General

What is the Office of the Inspector General?

The Global Fund has zero tolerance for fraud, corruption, human rights abuses, and waste that prevent resources from reaching the people who need them. Through its audits, investigations and advisory work, the Office of the Inspector General safeguards the Global Fund's assets, investments, reputation, and sustainability, reporting fully and transparently on abuse.

If you suspect irregularities or wrongdoing in programs financed by the Global Fund, you should report them to us.

1. Executive Summary

1.1 Investigation at a glance

The former Executive Director of International Civil Society Support (ICSS), a Netherlands-based Civil Society Organization, embezzled an estimated EUR 113,000 in Global Fund funding from ICSS, from the Global Coalition of TB Activists (GCTA) and from the Global Fund Board's Communities Delegation ('the parties') between 2018 and 2020.

These embezzled funds were among over EUR 550,000 in suspicious transactions undertaken by the individual, which involved multiple donors' funds from the three parties. Various fraudulent practices were employed, such as creating falsified payment requests, making unsupported bank transfers, and abusing access to corporate bank accounts and a corporate credit card with extensive unsupported and personal expenditure.

ICSS and GCTA lacked effective internal controls, as well as escalation and oversight mechanisms which could have identified and stopped the wrongdoing at an earlier stage.

1.2 Genesis and Scope

In July 2020, the Office of the Inspector General (OIG) received multiple allegations of financial irregularities in accounts connected to ICSS. ICSS self-reported that their former Executive Director (hereafter: 'the former ED') allegedly made multiple unsupported payments, which only came to light after they were terminated from their position. The individual had worked with ICSS since 2010 and was ED from January 2019 to until their employment was terminated in May 2020. They also attended Global Fund board meetings as a Delegate of the Communities Delegation between 2015 and 2019.

The OIG subsequently launched an investigation covering financial transactions made between 2018 and 2020. The OIG collected and analyzed financial records from bank accounts of the parties in scope, which contained funds from the Global Fund as well as other donors. The OIG also obtained and reviewed electronic records (e.g. email exchanges), and interviewed a number of witnesses.

ICSS, through its Executive Director ad interim and its Supervisory Board, cooperated closely with the OIG's investigation. GCTA and the Communities Delegation also assisted the investigation. The OIG invited the former Executive Director to multiple interviews, but they did not respond to our requests.

1.3 Findings

- Between 2018 and 2020, the former ED of ICSS embezzled EUR 113,000 of Global Fund money. This amount was among over EUR 550,000 of suspicious transactions from the bank accounts of ICSS, GCTA and the Communities Delegation, which each contained funds from multiple donors.
- While GCTA did not deliberately obstruct the OIG investigation, it breached its contractual terms with the Global Fund by being unable to provide accounts with suspected irregularities (GCTA did not possess those records as they were maintained by the former ED).
- Assurance mechanisms were ineffective. ICSS and GCTA missed red flags of fraud, and were not equipped to identify or act upon wrongdoing. The Global Fund Secretariat's oversight for this type of supplier is weak.

1.4 Context

Civil society, and communities living with and impacted by the three diseases, are at the heart of everything the Global Fund does. They play an active role at every level of operations, from policy development to implementation. Civil society and Communities are represented through three of the 20 voting seats on the Global Fund Board. Community and civil society organizations also play a central role at the local level, serving as implementers of Global Fund grants. More information about the role of civil society and communities can be found at www.theglobalfund.org/en/civil-society.

Three civil society bodies that receive Global Fund funding are concerned in this investigation: two suppliers and one Board constituency.

- International Civil Society Support (ICSS) was a supplier of advocacy services, including supporting the sustainability of the Global Fund Advocates Network (GFAN) operations and hosting the GFAN Secretariat. ICSS received EUR 337,560 from the Global Fund in 2019-2020 under various purchase orders, representing 20% of ICSS's donor revenue during this period. ICSS was a long-standing and well-regarded Global Fund partner.
- Global Coalition of TB Activists (GCTA) provides international TB advocacy services. The Global Fund awarded GCTA a US$140,250 grant for long term capacity development, funded under a Strategic Initiative to develop civil society organizations and promote community mobilization. The funds were paid in two tranches in 2018 and 2019, and represented 76% of GCTA's donor funding in the period.
- The Communities Delegation represents individuals living with HIV and affected by TB and malaria at the Global Fund Board, as a full voting member. The Global Fund is the Delegation's primary donor, and combined with funding for the Implementers Group which was also overseen by the Delegation, it received EUR 188,219 in funding in 2019-2020 under the Global Fund Constituency Funding Policy.

In addition to being a Global Fund supplier, ICSS served as 'Recipient Organization' (also known as a 'Fiscal Host') for the Communities Delegation and managed its finances, including the funding received from the Global Fund. Appointing a Fiscal Host is not unusual, given that Board delegations are often not registered entities, may have difficulties in opening bank accounts, and members change frequently. ICSS maintained a segregated bank account for the Communities Delegation, separate to its own operating account. ICSS' former ED was an account signatory of both accounts. The individual also served as Chairman of GCTA, essentially as an unofficial Fiscal Host, and was sole signatory of GCTA's bank accounts.

Methodology for financial analysis

Annex B of this report details the inter-dependent relationships between the parties and the former ED. Combined with the fact that the underlying funds came from multiple donors, this resulted in a complex web of transactions that required careful analysis.

As each of the parties' bank accounts contained 'co-mingled' funds from the Global Fund and other donors, it was not always possible to trace individual suspicious transactions to specific Global Fund grants. Therefore, the OIG first analyzed the bank accounts in scope for suspicious or unsupported transactions, which resulted in the identification of over EUR 550,000 in suspicious transactions. Some of those transactions involved unsupported transfers between the parties in the investigation, and the OIG considered this when analyzing the value of suspicious transactions or 'net-loss' from each party. ICSS also proactively recovered over EUR 80,000 from the former ED in 2020, which the OIG also considered when estimating the funds at risk.

Subsequently, the OIG estimated the value of Global Fund funds embezzled through combined analysis of the transactions in the bank accounts, relevant financial reporting such as accounting ledgers (which show how financial transactions are allocated to underlying activities or project budgets) and project reporting provided to the Global Fund from the parties in scope. Based on a combination of these records, the OIG was able to calculate the estimated Global Fund exposure resulting from the overall suspicious transactions on a party-by-party basis, as outlined in Annex A.

1.5 Impact of the investigation

This investigation underlines how opportunistic fraud, left undetected, can expand into more serious and systemic irregularities. In this case, the extent of the former ED's unsupported transactions, along with a lack of sufficient fundraising, contributed to ICSS entering liquidation in early 2021. Fortunately, ICSS' interim management transferred the majority of programs to alternate providers to avoid disruption to activities.

The investigation also highlights a number of important aspects: the challenges faced by small organizations which lack dedicated compliance resources or oversight mechanisms to effectively detect and respond to fraud, the risks caused by controls that rely substantively on one individual, how power imbalances can undermine the effectiveness of controls or avenues to 'speak out' against potential wrongdoing, as well as the risks of insufficient conflict of interest management when individuals have roles in multiple organizations.

From a Global Fund perspective, the case raises questions about proportionate oversight and monitoring of non-grant partners, particularly those fulfilling a vital programmatic activity such as community engagement and advocacy. Monitoring the value and impact of suppliers providing less-tangible services can be difficult, and requires adequate capacity assessment and project management. The Global Fund could offer more support to community-based partners and to suppliers using third parties for financial management, to better promote fraud awareness and help them adopt more robust controls. Additionally, the investigation identified potential recoveries for referral to the Recoveries Committee.

Due to the nature of the information obtained during the investigation, the OIG will consider referring Finding 2.1 to appropriate law enforcement authorities.

2. Findings

2.1 The former Executive Director of ICSS embezzled EUR 113,000 from ICSS, GCTA and the Communities Delegation

The OIG found extensive suspicious transactions linked to the former ED, including falsified payment requests, suspicious bank transfers to their own accounts, extensive use of money transfer agents, and frequent unsupported cash withdrawals and credit card payments. They also transferred funds embezzled from ICSS through GCTA bank accounts, misrepresenting them as Global Fund grant funds to disguise their illicit nature. This finding provides the details of over EUR 550,000 in suspicious transactions which the OIG identified in the parties' co-mingled bank accounts.

As detailed in Section 1.4, after identifying these overall suspicious transactions, the OIG then estimated the direct exposure to the Global Fund based on relevant financial records. The OIG found approximately EUR 113,000 of Global Fund resources were embezzled as a result of the overall suspicious transactions.

ICSS paid EUR 101,971 to accounts controlled by the former ED, based on falsified payment requests

In 2019, the former ED made multiple payments to accounts they controlled in the names of other organizations, as shown in Annex C. The payments were based on falsified payment requests.

Between April and October 2019, the former ED used falsified payment requests to divert EUR 31,971 from ICSS in six transfers to "Young and Positive", a civil society foundation which the former ED had established in 2003, and which they effectively controlled. These payment requests contained inconsistencies and evidence of falsification. No activities as described on the payment requests could be confirmed to have taken place, nor a valid contractual relationship between ICSS and "Young and Positive" identified.

On 22 July 2019, the former ED transferred EUR 70,000 from ICSS to a GCTA account ('Initial Account'), presenting a forged "Agreement" as justification for the payment. The individual had sole control of the GCTA Initial Account. GCTA representatives confirmed there was no valid agreement or rationale for the funds to have been transferred from ICSS. The following day, the former ED transferred EUR 60,204 to a second, previously undisclosed, GCTA bank account which the former ED had opened, employing a money laundering technique known as 'layering', commonly used to obscure the source of suspicious transactions. The former ED then misrepresented the source of funds to GCTA, stating they came from the Global Fund, as opposed to ICSS. Separately, the former ED made two further transfers from ICSS to GCTA, totaling EUR 4,446, in September 2019 and April 2020, for unverified purposes.

EUR 74,000 unaccounted for from GCTA bank accounts

Of the two GCTA accounts controlled by the former ED, the OIG estimates that at least EUR 23,795 remains unaccounted for from the Initial Account, which appeared to be inactive as of mid-2020, and EUR 50,635 from the Secondary Account, being the closing balance as of April 2020 (the last available information).

EUR 65,000 in GCTA expenses paid by ICSS without justification

The OIG assesses that the EUR 70,000 diversion from ICSS occurred to hide potential misuse of Global Fund funds from the GCTA Initial Account. Despite the GCTA Initial Account having been credited with over EUR 60,000 from the Global Fund on or around 11 October 2018, at least EUR 53,189 in funds from the ICSS Main Account was used without justification to pay GCTA's operating expenses throughout 2019, of which EUR 26,139 was not reimbursed.

A further EUR 39,000 of the former ED's 2018 ICSS credit card expenses was recorded as GCTA related, but the OIG found this could not reliably be shown to be genuine GCTA expenses and was more likely personal expenses, incorrectly recorded. These 2018 expenses were partially offset by EUR 15,584 misappropriated from GCTA to repay ICSS, without supporting documentation.

Failure to segregate funds and conflicts of interest in transactions

By making numerous unsupported transfers between ICSS and GCTA, the former Executive Director abused their position as a Director of the two entities. They also failed to declare the conflict of interest of being a controlling party of both parties involved in the transactions, contrary to the ICSS Articles of Association, Global Fund Standard Terms and Conditions, and the Global Fund Supplier Code of Conduct.

The former ED did not properly segregate funds, by using Communities Delegation account funds to pay a EUR 14,659 ICSS taxation obligation. They also redirected a EUR 31,605 grant from another donor provided to the Communities Delegation account back to ICSS, where the funds were subsequently used for general purposes.

The former ED also controlled various accounts with two online money transfer services in the names of GCTA, Young and Positive, ICSS and in their own name, from approximately July 2019. In October 2019, 13 transactions were made using these accounts. Forensic evidence showed that the individual received both payment and beneficiary notifications, indicating that the majority of these transactions involved sending money between accounts they controlled. These transfers were largely funded by EUR 9,000 added to one GCTA account, and EUR 2,550 transferred from the ICSS Main Account to another GCTA account.

EUR 55,572 transferred to the Executive Director's personal bank accounts

Between September 2019 and April 2020, the former ED made five suspicious payments totalling EUR 33,696 to a personal credit card from the ICSS Main Account and the Communities Delegation Account. The OIG found no evidence to justify these transfers.

During 2019 and 2020, the former ED received a further EUR 21,876 from ICSS for reimbursements or Daily Subsistence Allowances that were either unsupported or were duplicative of expenses paid with their ICSS credit card. In one case, they claimed a EUR 5,000 reimbursement for hotel costs for a September 2019 trip to New York, justified as having paid for the hotel with a personal credit card. In fact, they paid for the hotel using the ICSS credit card.

EUR 12,888 of ICSS-funded cash, goods and travel costs given to a personal associate

During 2018 and 2019, the former ED provided various travel expenses, daily subsistence allowances and purchases funded by ICSS valued at EUR 12,888 to a personal acquaintance. With no evidence of a bona-fide commercial relationship between this third party and ICSS, the OIG concludes that the money and goods were embezzled.

EUR 200,000 of unsupported cash and card transactions

The former ED used their access to ICSS funds, including a commercial credit card and a separate bank card both linked to the ICSS Main Account, to embezzle EUR 200,000 through extensive unsupported cash withdrawals and personal transactions.

During 2019 and 2020, the former ED used these cards to withdraw 63,876 from cash machines in the Netherlands, the United States, Switzerland and the UK. A number of these cash withdrawals were falsely recorded in the ICSS ledger as Daily Subsistence Allowances[1], while a further EUR 4,169 in cash from the Communities Delegation Account was given to the former ED in March 2020 and is unaccounted for.

The former ED also made over 100 payments totaling EUR 63,511 to money transfer agents and online remittance services, such as Western Union and PayPal, from their ICSS cards. While such methods can be efficient and cost effective to remit small sums internationally, they proved problematic in this case: in the absence of justification or appropriate record keeping, there was no way to know who was receiving the sums that the former ED was transferring.

The OIG identified at least EUR 77,429 in additional unsupported and apparent personal expenses incurred by the former ED and paid by ICSS between 2019 and 2020, such as luxury car hire and hotel stays in Amsterdam with no identified business need, as well as miscellaneous purchases of electronics, clothes, furniture, flight upgrades and mobile phone subscriptions.

A significant proportion of the former ED's ICSS credit card charges were recorded inaccurately in ICSS accounting ledgers. In 2018, over EUR 60,000 of credit card expenses were booked into six different unallocated expense accounts, indicating they could not be allocated to recognized ICSS activities or budget lines. Some of these unsupported expenses were offset by payments from Young and Positive and GCTA to ICSS in December 2018. In 2019, the former ED requested a new set of ledgers, starting 'fresh' accounts in the accounting system of ICSS.

Global Fund monies connected to the suspicious transactions were embezzled.

An estimated EUR 113,000 of Global Fund monies were embezzled from respective Global Fund partners as a result of the suspicious transactions described above (detailed in Annex A). As these funds were spent outside the purposes for which they were provided, and lacked adequate supporting documentation, they are non-compliant and potentially recoverable.

The OIG noted at the conclusion of the investigation that Global Fund processes for the referral of potentially recoverable non-grant funds are currently unclear.

[1] Daily Subsistence Allowances or 'Per Diems' are allowances for lodging, meals and other incidental travel expenses. They are particularly susceptible to fraud: see the 2021 OIG Investigation of Global Fund Grants in Namibia

2.2 GCTA breached Global Fund contractual terms by being unable to provide access to accounts with irregularities

GCTA was unable to provide the OIG with access to records or bank statements of their Initial Account. The former ED, who was the registered Chairperson of the GCTA corporate entity and maintained their accounts with a Netherlands-based financial institution, did not provide the complete records to GCTA during 2019, despite multiple requests. By not possessing the records, GCTA breached the Global Fund's Standard Terms and Conditions of Purchase of Services (Standard Terms and Conditions) and the Global Fund Code of Conduct for Suppliers, which requires suppliers "to maintain … all financial and accounting related records" and to "make such records available to the Global Fund or its authorized representative."

Through not having access to the records, the OIG was unable to fully investigate the suspected diversion of funds from both GCTA and ICSS in GCTA's Initial Account, the beneficiary account credited by the Global Fund and from the EUR 70,000 transfer from ICSS.

GCTA's failure to provide evidence material to a Global Fund enquiry was not deliberate. GCTA did not at any time possess the information and records required for this investigation, and relied solely on the former ED to execute payments and maintain records. The former ED repeatedly misrepresented the GCTA bank account situation in email and board meetings when requested to provide updates by GCTA, and did not respond to GCTA's demands for access to the account or account statements from mid-2019 onwards. GCTA did not intentionally conceal evidence, and was otherwise cooperative with this investigation.

2.3 Poor internal controls and missed red flags allowed opportunistic fraud to escalate over time

The findings of this investigation show how initially opportunistic fraudulent practices, such as abuse of a corporate credit card, can escalate into more complex – and financially material – fraudulent practices when left undetected or under weak controls. Both ICSS and the former ED were long-standing, trusted partners of the Global Fund, underscoring that fraud can emanate from surprising and familiar places.

Missed opportunities to identify and halt the wrongdoing

Several "red flags" were missed by ICSS and its external accountants. By any reasonable standards, the proportion of cash and credit card payments within ICSS revenue was unusually high. From 2018 onwards, the former ED routinely utilized the full monthly EUR 10,000 credit card limit, including extensive cash withdrawals and personal spending. Six additional expense accounts were created in the 2018 ledgers to record spending which ICSS could not otherwise register against existing activities.

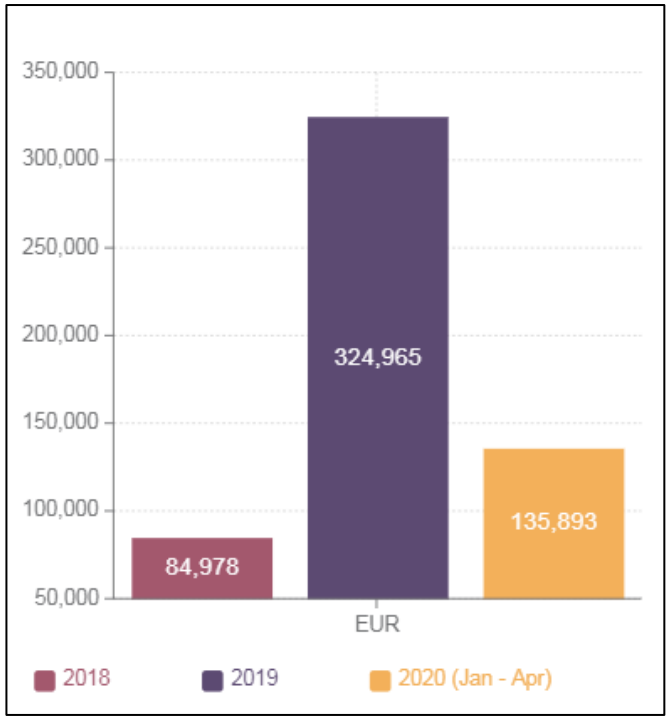

Figure 1: Value of suspicious transactions linked to former ED, all subject accounts. Note 2020 = four months to April.

If noticed and challenged earlier, the wrongdoing may have been halted. Once the former ED assumed the role in January 2019, they gained more authority, became more difficult to challenge, and it became much more problematic for ICSS to monitor and identify their wrongdoing. OIG analysis showed that the value of suspicious transactions more than tripled from 2018 to 2019, after the individual was promoted to the Executive Director role. The types of suspicious transactions extended from credit card abuse to the creation of false payment requests, making unsupported bank transfers, and abusing DSA entitlements.

Controls concentrated around the former ED, creating a power imbalance

ICSS and GCTA were small organizations that did not have dedicated compliance resources. While they had written policies, they relied heavily on trust between a small number of individuals, and especially on trust in the Executive Director.

There was also a power imbalance in ICSS, where the former ED occupied the top executive position and had the power and mandate to implement controls and run day-to-day affairs (including the Delegation Account). While the former ED reported to the ICSS Supervisory Board, the Board did not (and was not required to under local law) monitor operational matters or undertake spot checks of operational accounts.

ICSS' Accounts Executive observed potential wrongdoing by the ED, to whom they reported, but could not get the former ED to submit timely or accurate supporting documentation for expenses, or curtail their behavior. They were unable to escalate their concerns to an independent person in a timely manner, as the ICSS Supervisory Board did not have an established mechanism for escalating concerns around the ED.

Additional third-party risks impacted control mechanisms

This investigation highlights the additional risks created when funds are managed by third parties. In the case of ICSS, an external accountant was responsible for processing the data provided by ICSS. However, the former ED was the point of contact for the accountant's queries and there were significant delays in the finalization of the 2019 annual financial report. For the Communities Delegations and GCTA, the former ED was a third-party who did not provide accurate or timely financial information, seemingly to hide potential irregularities.

GCTA lacked the structure and resources to ensure the former ED acted appropriately, or to react appropriately when wrongdoing became apparent. GCTA's CEO is India-based, lacking proximity to the Netherlands and knowledge of that jurisdiction, and GCTA was completely reliant on the former ED to execute corporate affairs such as registration and bank account creation. Once the fraudulent activity became apparent, GCTA was unable to mitigate it. They did not compel the former ED to provide timely reporting or access to financial records, and as of the date of this report, have not yet managed to remove the former ED from their incorporation or bank accounts.

The former ED was therefore a single point of failure for all three organizations, none of whom had the mechanisms in place to detect or prevent the fraudulent transactions detailed in this investigation. Regardless of whether they use third-party financial management, all suppliers retain responsibility for maintaining funds provided by the Global Fund and having access to accurate books and records, as per the Global Fund's Standard Terms and Conditions and the Global Fund Code of Conduct for Suppliers.

Global Fund oversight over non-traditional suppliers is insufficient

Global Fund assurance mechanisms tend to prioritize grant implementers under a risk-based approach, for example through detailed budgeting guidelines, programmatic monitoring and periodic Local Fund Agent reviews. The Global Fund engages a wide variety of suppliers under Purchase Orders, ranging from major commodity suppliers down to partner-advocacy services such as those covered in this investigation. Suppliers are largely responsible for implementing their own financial controls and fraud prevention activities. The Global Fund does not have a differentiated assurance approach to suppliers of less tangible services, such as advocacy or other community support, or specific budgeting guidance for non-grant expenditure.

ICSS and GCTA largely provided advocacy services, which can be difficult to quantify and monitor. They were more akin to specialized partners delivering programmatic activities than to typical suppliers. The Global Fund does not undertake sufficient and proportional performance and controls/governance capacity assessments of these types of non-traditional suppliers, and does not have consistent or documented guidance on contract management mechanisms to ensure effective and efficient delivery of professional services such as advocacy.

While acknowledging that controls need to be proportionate to the size and complexity of an organization, the OIG noted that the fraud was further enabled by weak and insufficient internal controls within the subject organizations:

- Credit cards, settled via direct debit without first being reviewed and approved, placed the risk of unsupported spending with the organization in the first instance, rather than the individual. Cash withdrawals were commonly used. To reduce the risk, and assuming credit cards were considered essential, cash withdrawals could have been disabled, and the lowest practical monthly limits established to reduce the risk of misuse.
- Payment controls could have been improved by technical solutions such as dual signatories to release payments through online bank accounts, to augment internal 'four-eyes' controls. Consideration could also have been given to differentiated transfer approval limits, to balance flexibility with appropriate controls for larger external payments, for example by requesting supervisory board member approval.

- Conflicts of interest provisions did not fully identify secondary positions held by account signatories or executives, allowing the former ED to make transactions between entities they controlled.
- Cash and remittance services for DSA or other incidental payments were used extensively by ICSS and the Delegation, but as not all payments were fully documented, it could not be confirmed that they reached the right people.
- Risks around the power imbalance of the former ED's executive roles in ICSS and GCTA were exacerbated by a lack of clear and established escalation procedures to allow relevant stakeholders to raise any issues about the individual in a timely fashion. These risks were increased by the fact that the ICSS management board was constituted solely by the former ED.
- External bookkeepers or accountants should also have had the scope and capacity to identify and raise concerns or irregularities to appropriate independent persons, such as audit committees or other supervisory functions.

The Global Fund should adequately support partners with limited compliance capacity, including smaller civil society organizations, with a differentiated level of oversight and by developing their fraud awareness and capacity to maintain effective controls.

3. Global Fund Response

Action to be taken	Due date	Owner
1. Based on the findings of this report, the Secretariat will finalize and pursue from the relevant entity/entities an appropriate recoverable amount (if any, as determined by the Secretariat) from the non-compliant expenditures identified in this report.	30 September 2022	General Counsel and Head, Legal and Governance Department
2. The Secretariat will develop an SOP and guidance for all Global Fund focal points dealing with non-traditional suppliers to ensure robust implementation of underlying funds in line with expected services and consistent oversight including recovery of non-grant funds. In addition, the Secretariat will continue to raise awareness of the Global Fund's anti-fraud policies and principles. The focus should be placed on supporting Civil Society and Community-based partners who may have limited internal compliance resourcing or rely on third party financial management or controls.	31 December 2022	Chief Financial Officer

Annex D: Methodology

Why we investigate: Wrongdoing, in all its forms, is a threat to the Global Fund's mission to end the AIDS, tuberculosis and malaria epidemics. It corrodes public health systems and facilitates human rights abuses, ultimately stunting the quality and quantity of interventions needed to save lives. It diverts funds, medicines and other resources away from countries and communities in need. It limits the Global Fund's impact and reduces the trust that is essential to the Global Fund's multi-stakeholder partnership model.

What we investigate: The OIG is mandated to investigate any use of Global Fund funds, whether by the Global Fund Secretariat, grant recipients, or their suppliers. OIG investigations identify instances of wrongdoing, such as fraud, corruption and other types of non-compliance with grant agreements. The Global Fund Policy to Combat Fraud and Corruption[2] outlines all prohibited practices, which will result in investigations.

OIG investigations aim to:

(i) identify the nature and extent of wrongdoing affecting Global Fund grants;
(ii) identify the entities responsible for such wrongdoing;
(iii) determine the amount of grant funds that may have been compromised by wrongdoing; and
(iv) place the Global Fund in the best position to recover funds, and take remedial and preventive action, by identifying where and how the misused funds have been spent.

The OIG conducts administrative, not criminal, investigations. It is recipients' responsibility to demonstrate that their use of grant funds complies with grant agreements. OIG findings are based on facts and related analysis, which may include drawing reasonable inferences. Findings are established by a preponderance of evidence. All available information, inculpatory or exculpatory, is considered by the OIG.[3] As an administrative body, the OIG has no law enforcement powers. It cannot issue subpoenas or initiate criminal prosecutions. As a result, its ability to obtain information is limited to the access rights it has under the contracts the Global Fund enters into with its recipients, and on the willingness of witnesses and other interested parties to voluntarily provide information.

The OIG bases its investigations on the contractual commitments undertaken by recipients and suppliers. Principal Recipients are contractually liable to the Global Fund for the use of all grant funds, including those disbursed to Sub-recipients and paid to suppliers. The Global Fund's Code of Conduct for Suppliers[4] and Code of Conduct for Recipients provide additional principles, which recipients and suppliers must respect. The Global Fund Guidelines for Grant Budgeting define compliant expenditures as those that have been incurred in compliance with the terms of the relevant grant agreement (or have otherwise been pre-approved in writing by the Global Fund) and have been validated by the Global Fund Secretariat and/or its assurance providers based on documentary evidence.

Note: Grants are typically subject to either the Global Fund's Standard Terms and Conditions of the Program Grant Agreement, or to the Grant Regulations (2014), which incorporate the Code of Conduct for Recipients and mandate use of the Code of Conduct for Suppliers. Terms may vary however in certain grant agreements.

Who we investigate: The OIG investigates Principal Recipients and Sub-recipients, Country Coordinating Mechanisms and Local Fund Agents, as well as suppliers and service providers. Secretariat activities linked to the use of funds are also within the scope of the OIG's work.[5] While the OIG does not typically have a direct relationship with the Secretariat's or recipients' suppliers, its investigations[6] encompass their activities regarding the provision of goods and services. To fulfill its mandate, the OIG needs the full cooperation of these suppliers to access documents and officials.[7]

Sanctions when prohibited practices are identified: When an investigation identifies prohibited practices, the Global Fund has the right to seek the refund of grant funds compromised by the related contractual breach. The OIG has a fact-finding role and does not determine how the Global Fund will enforce its rights. Nor does it make judicial decisions or issue sanctions.[8] The Secretariat determines what management actions to take or contractual remedies to seek in response to the investigation findings.

However, the investigation will quantify the extent of any non-compliant expenditures, including amounts the OIG proposes as recoverable. This proposed figure is based on:

(i) amounts paid for which there is no reasonable assurance that goods or services were delivered (unsupported expenses, fraudulent expenses, or otherwise irregular expenses without assurance of delivery);
(ii) amounts paid over and above comparable market prices for such goods or services; or
(iii) amounts incurred outside of the scope of the grant, for goods or services not included in the approved work plans and budgets or for expenditures in excess of approved budgets.

How the Global Fund prevents recurrence of wrongdoing: Following an investigation, the OIG and the Secretariat agree on management actions that will mitigate the risks that prohibited practices pose to the Global Fund and its recipients' activities. The OIG may make referrals to national authorities for criminal prosecutions or other violations of national laws and support such authorities as necessary throughout the process, as appropriate.
